Warm-up games are a great way to get your students moving and practicing their English at the same time. Here are a few warm-up games to try:

- Simon Says: Give your students commands in English, such as "Simon says touch your head" or "Simon says jump up and down." Students should only follow the commands that start with "Simon says."
- Musical Chairs: Place chairs in a circle, with one less chair than the number of students. Play music and have students walk around the chairs. When the music stops, students must quickly sit down in a chair. The student left without a chair is out.
- Hot Potato: Pass a beanbag or small ball around the circle while music plays. When the music stops, the student holding the beanbag must say a word in English, such as a color, animal, or food.

Vocabulary games are a great way to help your students learn new words and practice using them in context. Here are a few vocabulary games to try:

- Bingo: Create bingo cards with pictures or words on them. Call out the words or pictures in English, and students must find the corresponding square on their bingo card and cover it. The first student to get five in a row wins.
- Charades: Write down a list of words or phrases on pieces of paper. Have students take turns picking a piece of paper and acting out the word or phrase while their classmates try to guess.

- Pictionary: Draw a picture of a word or phrase on a whiteboard or piece of paper. Have students take turns trying to guess what the picture is.

Grammar games can help your students learn and practice grammar rules in a fun and engaging way. Here are a few grammar games to try:

- Sentence Builder: Write down different parts of a sentence on separate pieces of paper, such as a subject, verb, object, and adverb. Have students take turns picking pieces of paper and putting them together to create a complete sentence.
- Verb Conjugation Relay: Divide your students into teams. Give each team a list of verbs and their conjugations. Have the teams race to conjugate the verbs correctly.
- Grammar Bingo: Create bingo cards with different grammar rules on them, such as "past tense verbs" or "plural nouns." Call out sentences or phrases in English, and students must identify the grammar rule that applies and cover the corresponding square on their bingo card.

Conversation games are a great way to help your students practice speaking English in a natural and communicative way. Here are a few conversation games to try:

- Twenty Questions: Think of an object, person, or place. Have students take turns asking you questions in English to try to guess what it is. You can only answer "yes" or "no."
- Would You Rather?: Give your students two choices and ask them which one they would rather do. For example, "Would you rather eat pizza or pasta?" Encourage students to explain their answers in English.

- Storytelling: Start telling a story in English, and then stop and have students take turns continuing the story. Encourage students to use their imaginations and be creative.

These are just a few of the many easy ESL games for low level kids that you can use in your classroom. With these games, you can make learning English fun and engaging while also helping your students develop their language skills.

Remember to set ground rules before playing games, and to adapt the games to fit the needs of your students. With a little creativity, you can use games to make your ESL lessons more enjoyable and effective.
