Common Mistakes to Avoid

- Not being ready to play when it's your turn. This is one of the most common etiquette mistakes, and it can be very frustrating for other players. Be sure to arrive at the tee box on time, and take a few practice swings to get ready. If you're not ready, let the other players play through.
- Not repairing divots. Divots are the indentations in the ground left by your club after you hit the ball. It's important to repair these divots so that the course remains in good condition. To repair a divot, simply use your club or a tee to fill in the indent.

- Not raking bunkers. Bunkers are the sandy areas on the course. When you hit the ball into a bunker, it's important to rake the sand after you've hit your shot. This helps to keep the bunkers in good condition and makes it easier for other players to hit out of them.
- Not replacing divots. Divots are the indentations in the ground left by your club after you hit the ball. It's important to replace these divots so that the course remains in good condition. To replace a divot, simply take a couple of pieces of grass and place them in the indent.
- Not being considerate of other players. Golf is a game that should be enjoyed by everyone, and it's important to be considerate of other players. Be mindful of your pace of play, and don't hold up the players behind you. Also, be aware of your surroundings and be sure not to hit the ball near other players or into their line of play.

Benefits of Good Golf Etiquette

- It makes the game more enjoyable for everyone. When everyone follows the rules of etiquette, the game flows smoothly and everyone has a chance to enjoy themselves.
- It helps to maintain the course in good condition. By repairing divots and raking bunkers, you help to keep the course in good condition for everyone to enjoy.
- It shows that you're a respectful player. When you follow the rules of etiquette, you show that you're a respectful player who cares about the game and the other players.
